

Charitable Remainder Trust Understanding the Benefits

Why a Charitable Remainder Trust may be right for you

What is a Charitable Remainder Trust?

A charitable remainder trust (CRT) is a specially designed trust that can provide you, and your family, with income and financial security during life and help you make a charitable gift to support our cause.

Increase your retirement income and financial security.

How can a Charitable Remainder Trust benefit you?

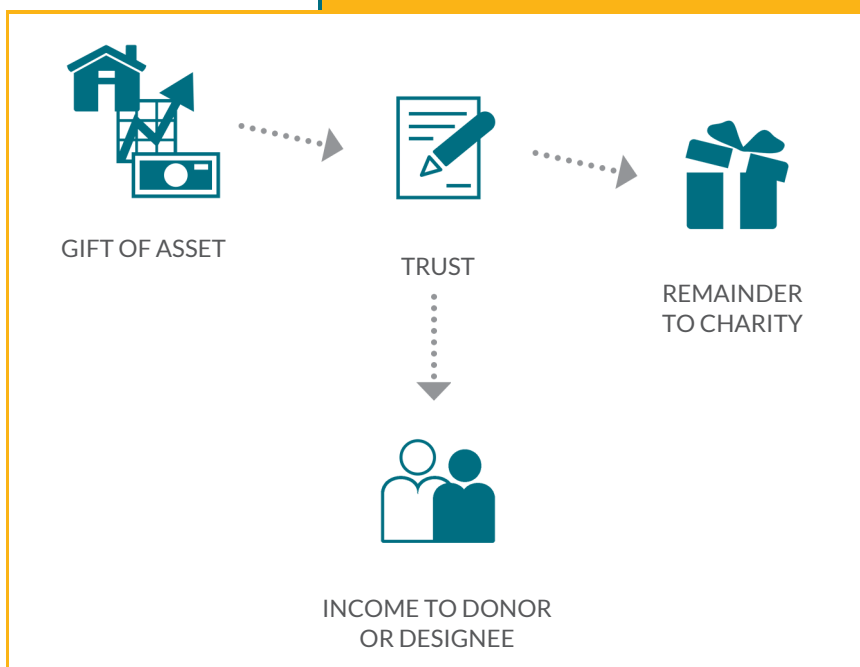

A charitable remainder trust can help you:

- Receive a lifetime of income for you, your spouse and/or your family.
- Increase your retirement income and financial security.
- Make a significant future legacy gift to help continue our work.
- Obtain a substantial income tax deduction this year.
- Support the charitable causes important to you.

Do You Own Highly Appreciated Assets?

If you own highly appreciated assets such as securities, real estate and/or a business, you can benefit by using these assets to fund a charitable remainder trust. The trust will sell your assets tax free, and you can avoid paying capital gains tax on the sale.

How a Charitable Remainder Trust Works

- You transfer appreciated assets or cash to fund a charitable remainder trust.
- If you use appreciated assets, the trust will then sell these assets tax free.
- The trust will invest the assets and pay income to you and/or your selected beneficiaries.
- You will receive a charitable income tax deduction in the year you transfer assets to the trust.
- Our organization benefits from the remaining trust assets after all payments have been made.
